Expanding User Group

The JML Firearms user group was again extremely well attended by its customer base. A good mix of talks and the opportunity to exchange ideas saw over a 90% attendance with only operational commitments keeping forces at bay.

The key speaker was Andy Latto, head of the NPIA Firearms implementation team. Andy provided the group with guidance and advice on national matters and the licensing procedure.

The outside speaker section was taken by Plowman & Craven who are the federation's choice of call out for any scene preservation and reconstruction following a police shooting. Andy Molloy, director of Plowman and Craven gave a presentation along with colleagues of the company's capabilities and how their cutting edge technology could help officers during an investigation.

"Outside of the NPIA instructors' conference, this is the largest gathering of CFI's in the country." Stated JML CEO Luis Ponte. "It is a great opportunity for CFI's from each force to exchange ideas and amalgamate working practices. This year's event was half a day longer than last years at the request of the user group. I believe that this is a sign of how valuable these sessions are to users."

Lots of ideas were exchanged and JML have placed a lot of the material discussed during the event on their user forums to enhance the flow of information between forces.

The group also voted in the next round of changes that they saw as essential for the system to continue meeting their needs.

The event was a great success and with sales progressing at a rapid rate, we look forward to a busier user group next year.
